A MODERN BUILDING EQUIPPED TO FACILITATE THE TREND IN ... MODERN EDUCATION

Education today is centered around the well-equipped school building. Since modern educators have come to the conclusion that learning comes through well directed activity, the trend has been to utilize the most modern forms of teaching and equipment in the school.

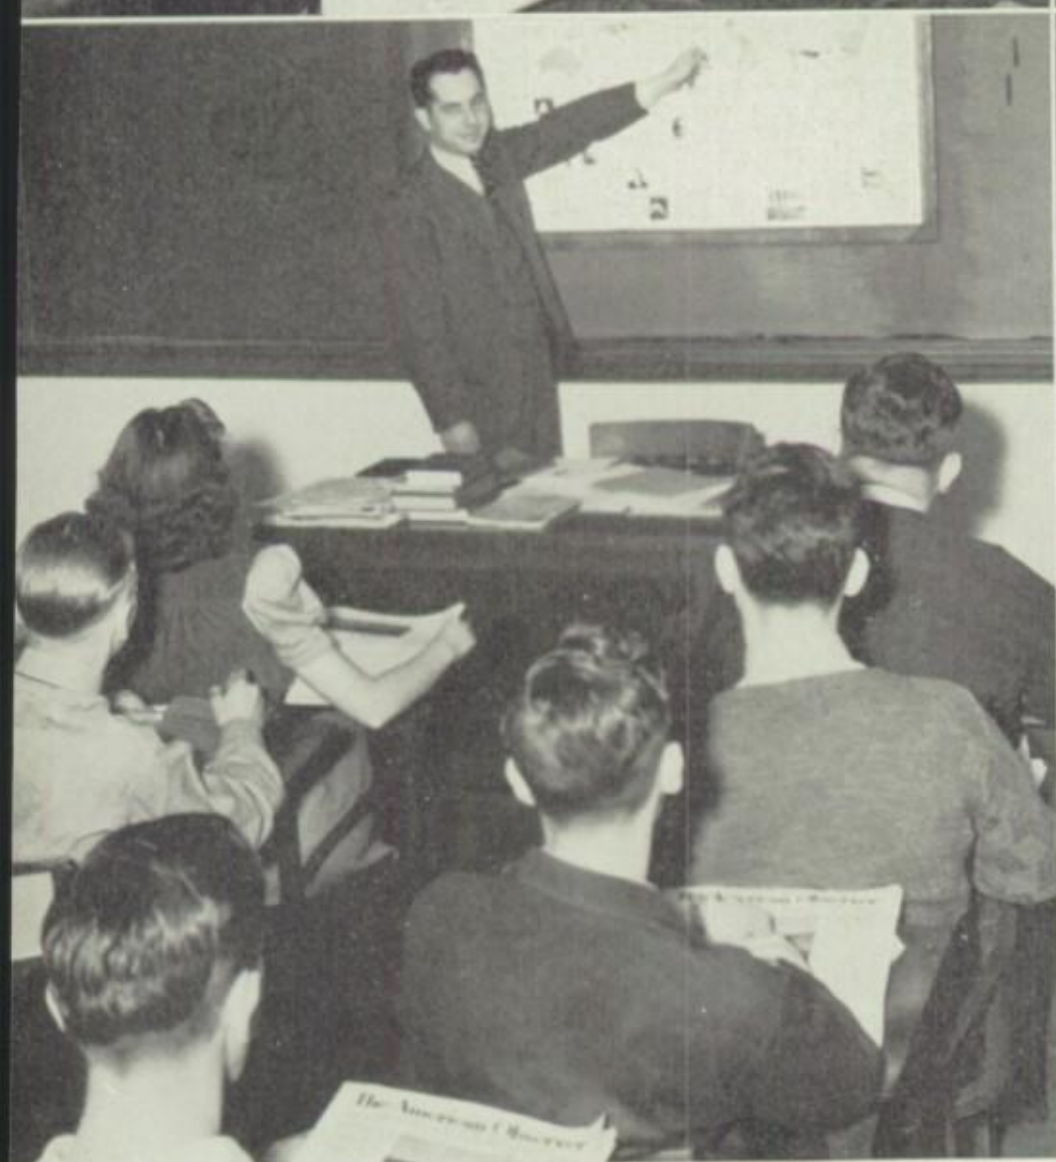

Norwin symbolizes such a trend in education. Briefly reviewing its growth from 1916 when Norwin opened with an enrollment of three hundred and forty students to today when the enrollment has reached the thousand mark, we find that much has been done in the way of providing for a well-equipped school plant. In 1937 the annex was opened for use, thus eliminating the two session day and opening the way for a wider and more comprehensive academic program. The home economics department was enlarged, so that girls could obtain extensive instruction in household arts. Classrooms were made available for all teachers of subject materials. An industrial arts department was added that offered courses in woodcraft, electric welding, and machine work. To facilitate such work many new pieces of equipment were installed, thus giving Norwin one of the best equipped shop departments in the district.

The commercial department was given larger quarters and more equipment. This enabled the commercially-minded students to secure business training that will aid them after graduation.

With the addition of a modern well-equipped gymnasium Norwin has and is providing wholesome athletic and social programs. These mean much in the lives of the future citizens of America. In fact, with so much emphasis being placed on health education all schools feel justified in providing a thorough and adequate physical program.

MODERN EDUCATION AT NORWIN H. S.

TREND AND TRADITION

The trend toward more modern ideas is very evident in our academic studies, industrial arts department, home economics courses, commercial subjects, sports, social activities, and extra-curricular clubs. However, traditional procedures have not been discarded, but rather combined with modern tendencies to make a well-balanced and all-around school program. Because of this, we are justly proud of our school, and feel that we can do it honor by portraying in our yearbook the various ways by which the modern program of education is presented at Norwin.

COMMAND OF THE FUNDAMENTAL PROCESSES

To keep up with the modern trend in education one must have some idea of the fundamental processes which lie behind this trend. The aim of this section of the book is to give the reader a pictorial review of the way Norwin presents such procedures, so that he will have a better understanding of the processes that promote our functional program.

LEADERS IN THE MODERN TREND

Norwin is fortunate in having administrative leaders who recognize the need for modern procedures and equipment. In Mr. Carl C. Pearsall, Superintendent of Schools, we find those qualities that make him a progressive leader in the educational field. In the years he has been affiliated with Norwin, he has brought to a culmination a building program that has given us a well equipped school plant. Moreover, he has encouraged the enlargement and enrichment of the curriculum for the schools under his supervision.

Mr. John W. Clawson, principal of Norwin, has always believed in progressiveness in his supervision of activities at Norwin. In planning schedules, regulating attendance and discipline problems, supervising curricular and extra-curricular activities, Mr. Clawson has shown his belief in the modern trend in education. His sympathetic direction of the problems of the boys and girls have marked him as a friendly adviser.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

J. BLANKETTE
President of Norwin Board

The theme of Modern Education characterizes everything that the Board of Education is constantly striving to achieve in their supervision of the education of the youth of our community.

During the past years, this group has borne the most essential responsibility of the community, that of educating its prospective citizenry with a conscientious sense of duty and service.

Through their endeavor they have provided better facilities for all departments and have helped to raise the scholastic standing of our school. By adding many new books to the library shelves, by keeping our textbooks up to date, and by furnishing our school's departments with modern equipment, they are continually expressing their interest in the future of Norwin.

Under the guidance of such capable leaders as Joseph Blankette, President; Dr. J. Kifer, Vice President; Rev. Dietrich, Secretary, and C. E. Blair, Treasurer, this efficient Norwin Board has maintained for this community one of the finest secondary schools in the state.

TRAIN FOR FUTURE

No organization can function properly without a well-trained personnel, and Norwin is no exception. Rather, it boasts an excellent staff of teachers and advisers who cooperate with the students in all Norwin activities, both curricular and extra-curricular.

FACULTY

Heading the list is the English department. Shakespeare and his contemporaries, verb forms and prepositions—all are presented to Norwinites in four years. Freshmen thrill at the story of "Ivanhoe" in classes conducted by Mrs. Kerner, Miss Willis, or Miss Ramsey. In the sophomore classes of Miss Barnard, Miss Gallagher and Miss Ramsey, "Silas Marner" and "As You Like It" are read and discussed. Juniors, going to the rooms of Miss Gallagher and Miss Painter, thrill at Uncas, "The Last of the Mohicans." And then, that memorable senior year—students mumbling "Whan that Aprille . . ." under their breath. And Lady Macbeth, too, is studied by the classes of Mr. Patterson and Miss Willis.

And then, history. Don't you remember Hannibal and his famous trip across the Alps? Or all those battles of Napoleon and his army? We learned them in history—of course, you remember. How to be a good citizen is one of the things taught in Mr. Rainey's civics classes. Delving into the stone age are the sophomore classes of Mrs. Trombley and Miss Hershey. Juniors, dealing with American history, enter the rooms of Mrs. Kerner, Miss Painter, Miss Rackley or Miss Hershey. The problems of democracy are discussed and debated in Mr. Schwartz's senior classes. Mr. Vernail, too, explains the whys and wherefores of our modern system of government.

CULTURAL LIFE

Next, mathematics. Here is where you learn how many degrees are in a right angle and memorize all the axioms and postulates. Mr. Muellerschoen explains fundamental principles of algebra. Mr. Paul Brown tells his geometry classes that "triangles with sides respectively equal are congruent." Miss Jones teaches freshman algebra and senior socialized mathematics. Mr. McMunn, teaching upper classes of math, has a way of making even "x" interesting.

Learning all about nature's wonders and modern inventions are the students who study science. Test tubes, frogs' legs and inner parts of refrigerators are analyzed by pupils. To puzzled freshmen Mr. Muellerschoen explains problems of general science. Tarcisio Onder tells of the mysteries of life and growth to his biology classes. Mr. Onder also coaches Norwin's football team. Explaining the center of gravity to his physics students is Mr. Hunt. Over bunsen burners, and under the supervision of Mr. Trombley, senior chemists experiment with a few suggestions and jokes from the "Chief."

Dictation, typing, duplicating — all play a part in the school routine of students who hope someday to take a place in the business world. Miss Santner tries to avoid the uneven rhythm of typewriters. Miss Saunders dictates to office training classes. Commercial geography is taught by Miss Lewis. Mr. David Brown's curriculum contains bookkeeping, accounting, and junior business training. Miss McMaster instructs her classes in shorthand and junior business training.

In the hopes of someday speaking to a Frenchman or one of Caesar's descendants, students assume the study of languages, Latin and French. In Miss Rackley's classes, students begin their study of Latin rules while in Mr. Brown's second year class, they delve deeper into its secrets. "Comprenez-vous la lecon pour demain?" First year students study French vocabulary from Mr. Vernail. Second year students read "Sans Famille" and "L'abbe' Constantine."

GRAPHIC AND USEFUL ARTS

In the Home Economics department Miss Norberg teaches girls the fundamentals of homemaking. As for the Mechanical Arts Department, Mr. Pollock, Mr. Wolfe, and Mr. Coles combine to give boys training in Manual Arts.

The Fine Arts—art and music. Mr. Hetrick, in the music room, finds his schedule full of events such as the annual operetta, boys' chorus, girls' lyric, and orchestra. Mr. Edwards presides over the Art Room where students dab in inks and paints.

Miss Sowash, our librarian, is always willing to aid students and teachers in their search for reference material to be used in the classrooms or private study.

Norwin's guardians of Health—gymnastics and health classes have an important part in the curriculum. Amidst basketballs and volleyballs, tumbling mats and archery sets, Norwin lads and lasses indulge in sports. Miss Allshouse is guardian of the girls while Mr. McClelland trains the boys. In health classes both boys and girls learn better health habits. Yearly physical checkups inform students of physical defects.

Last but certainly not least is the department which handles office routine. Miss Rylander, the efficient school secretary, daily stamps tardy slips and excuses, and files permanent records in addition to her regular secretarial duties.

FOUR YEARS OF SERVICE

The Senior Class of 1941 entered Norwin in the fall of 1937. They elected as their leaders during the trying freshman year, Glenn Gongaware, president; Harry Wisser, vice president; and Emma Jean Helman, secretary. The class of '41 was the first incoming class to have full day sessions and the results were continually shown throughout their four years at Norwin. As freshmen the class was a little inexperienced, but in spite of this they participated in numerous clubs. Their dramatic endeavors were considered on par with upper-class productions. Many classmen joined the Press club, music groups, and as many attained scholastic recognition.

By the fall of 1938 the class of '41 had become a little more accustomed to high school life. They were joined by the students from the Junior High School and together these groups elected Nevin Wollam, Robert Swenson, and Emma Jean Helman, president, vice president, and secretary. Again in their sophomore year, the members of the class participated in club, social, and scholastic activities throughout the term.

In September 1939 they started in on the last half of their high school careers by electing Nevin Wollam, Regis Burlas, and Ella Barton to lead them. The juniors were concerned mostly that year with ways and means of raising money for the annual junior-senior Prom, and the numerous other activities encountered during the junior year.

The trying task of senior administration was entrusted to Regis Burlas, Nevin Wollam, and Ella Barton, with Mr. Schwartz, as adviser. Senior activities were numerous and the class was busy the whole year with such things as Gift and Announcement committees, the Christmas Hop, and varied other social activities. The climax came with frenzied preparation for the Senior Play, the Pageant, and Commencement exercises.

UNDERCLASSMEN PROVIDED WITH A RICH SOCIAL BACKGROUND

The underclassmen of Norwin were, as usual, very active this year. They took an active part in all extracurricular functions. The schedule was a full one, both socially and scholastically, and the juniors, sophomores, and freshmen can feel that they contributed much towards making the past year a highly successful one. It would be impossible to name everyone who had a part in this success, but we shall endeavor to mention some of the most outstanding underclassmen in scholarship, athletics, clubs, and other activities.

The junior class sponsored its annual junior-senior prom and farm frolic, and revived the long-discarded tradition of a junior-senior party. They also enjoyed choosing class rings which arrived April 28th. For the successful operations of the plans of the junior class during the past year, much credit belongs to the class officers. Jack Johnson, class president, was outstanding in publications as co-editor of the Norwin Bi-Weekly. He also acted as master of ceremonies at several assembly programs and was general manager of the basketball team. Jane Wyncoop, junior secretary, a member of the Tri-Hi-Y, was outstanding in athletics. The vice-president, Clifford Taylor, a Hi-Y member, was on the basketball squad. Ray Siegel and Fred Uhlig were also notable basketeters and figured largely in Norwin athletics. Ruth Frisk was noteworthy in athletics and a very active member of the Bi-Weekly business staff. Art Weaver and Christy Laffoon, both band members, made classes interesting with their lively wit.

SOCIAL LIFE

Charles Johnston and Jack Sprankle should have a round of applause for organizing the first corporation on record at Norwin, and Charles figured as the junior "literary-genius-to-be." Esther Tyler earned three cheers for her clever observances in French class and Jack Scott rated as the junior most resembling Mickey Rooney. In a musical way, the outstanding juniors were James Soukup, Robert Dunn, Hazel McMunn, Jean Lang, and Phyllis Widmyer, who all played important roles in the operetta, "Iolanthe." Jennie Mae Mistero and Jack Klassen entertained many times with renditions of popular songs, while Betty Santmyer pleased audiences with her tap dancing. Joan Yoney, Thelma Cipra, and James Helman were probably the most outstanding juniors, scholastically. Howard Bullock and Louis Kober worked in the sports department of the Bi-Weekly with Howard as sports editor. Louis belonged to the football and basketball squads and worked hard and well on both.

And now we come to the sophomores. They had their freshmen-sophomore party and published the Sophomore Bla-Bla. Their president was Scott Hockensmith, who took the lead in the sophomore play. Ray Moore, the vice-president played basketball, while Geraldine Watson acted as class secretary. In the sophomore play were Else Gregor, Malcolm Hamilton, Harry Davis and Isabelle Exton. Else Gregor also wrote for the Bi-Weekly, while Malcolm, who was very fond of practical jokes, was known as the sophomore jester. Another member of the dramatic department was Dale McMunn who entertained everyone so hilariously as the baby in an assembly sketch. Clara Altman distinguished herself for her singing and Charles Smith for his delightful musical talents. Some "good-grade-getters" among the sophomores were Vivian Sensenich, James Drylie, Ray Moore, Else Gregor, and Ray Wollam. The sophomores were especially proud of their basketball players, and with good reason, for they had many of them: Blaine Shea, Edwin Clarke, David Anderson, John Johnston, Joe Holly, and Jim Tharp. Virginia Scherff was a sophomore cheerleader and Gloria Parks could be identified in any crowd by her lovely clothes. You can see by this array of names that the class of '43 is headed for bigger and better things at Norwin.

Although the freshmen did not have much opportunity to shine in the different fields, they showed signs of becoming an outstanding class. They got off to an excellent start with Eldon Carlson as president, and secretary Betty Erickson. Thomas Javior was on the basketball team, while Charles Cuccaro was very much interested in football. Geneva Kleckner was an outstanding mathematician, we hear, and Edward Smetak was taken into the Leaders' Club.

No school history would be complete without a review of the activities conducted by the ninth graders of the Irwin Junior High. After settling down to the usual school routine, the students eagerly repeated the tradition of publishing their newspaper, the "Irwinite," of which Lois Clarke was editor. Helping to enliven their school year were many enjoyable social functions—the main event being the annual Hallowe'en Jamboree. February also proved to be a very unusual month with the Press Club sponsoring Junior High's first tea dance. Adding to the educational aspect of the 1940-41 term, was the organization of new clubs. The outstanding ones being the Library Club and the Dramatic Club, which rapidly progressed, because of expert guidance. "Thirty Minutes with Santa Claus" and "The Star Flower," an Indian legend, were the annual dramatizations presented by the entire school.

ETHICAL CHARACTER AND CIVIC EDUCATION

The modern school recognizes its part in the developing of ethical and social aspects of the lives of boys and girls. By means of participation in clubs and social affairs, the student becomes aware of the meaning of responsibility and cooperation. Thus, he is better fitted to cope with the civic problems that will face him after graduation.

JOURNALISTIC TRAINING

GIVES VALUABLE EXPERIENCE

In the modern, complex world of today, the places of leadership are taken by those who gain experience while they are still in high school. Meeting the needs of the student for this experience are the two publications of Norwin—the Yearbook and Bi-Weekly.

A trip to the printers, a worried look about due articles, or reading a long proof galley—these are a few of the many duties which confront the staff members of the Norwin Bi-Weekly. The editorial staff, under co-editors Marilyn Hayes and Jack Johnson, was kept busy meeting the deadline once every two weeks, hunting for news, rewriting assignments and proof reading. The business staff, headed by Nevin Wollam, was engaged in its numerous duties throughout the school term working for subscriptions, keeping advertising going, and collecting payments from subscribers.

Clinking silver, a busy pencil, the staccato beat of a typewriter—these are all indications of the serious work of the members of the Norwin Yearbook staff. The business staff, under business manager, Elton Kunkle, proved the capability of the student of today by selling more yearbooks than in any previous year and doubling the list of patrons. Under co-editors Patricia Anderson and James McClellan, the editorial staff strove for a more candid composition and more pictures, formal and informal, for the 1941 annual.

At various times during the year the two staffs combined to promote journalistic activities. To promote the social life of the school and to raise money for expenses, the staffs collaborated on the sponsorship of the first major dance of the year, the annual Christmas Hop. The Yearbook and Bi-Weekly staffs, under the advisership of Mrs. Isabel Kerner and Mr. Paul Brown, respectively, attended several conferences in which members of the staffs participated. One never-to-be-forgotten trip was the one to the C.S.P.A. Convention in New York. Jean Dobbie, of the Bi-Weekly, Pat Anderson of the Yearbook and Mrs. Kerner, Yearbook adviser, attended.

QUILL AND SCROLL

Kunkle, Dobbie, Hayes, Anderson, Heasley, McClellan

Extra-curricular activities in the school must have definite purposes for functioning. The organizations pictured on these pages definitely help to prepare their members for leadership.

Foremost among these activities is the Quill and Scroll, an organization to which only outstanding journalism students may belong. Marilyn Hayes, Patricia Anderson, Jean Dobbie, Gail Heasley, Elton Kunkle, and James McClellan were the six honored seniors to be chosen for membership into this international society. The organization's purpose is accomplished by encouraging "budding journalists" to take their jobs seriously and thus eventually becoming worthy of entrance into this society.

Recognizing both character and leadership is the Tri-Hi-Y. The members of this organization met during the past term every Monday after school to "rub shoulders." Conducting covered dish dinners, packing Christmas baskets, and alternating with the Hi-Y in the reading of the Bible in regular assemblies—were a few things the members participated in during the year. Several of the girls attended a Hi-Y, Tri-Hi-Y Rally at Jeannette. Acting as president was Jean Dobbie; vice president, Helen Haslop; secretary, Eleanor Clawson; and treasurer, Marian Siegel.

ORGANIZATION

By "creating and maintaining a high standard of Christian fellowship," the Hi-Y club has definitely helped in the development of the qualities of a leader. Headed by Regis Burlas as president; Robert Swenson, vice president; James McClellan, secretary; William Uhlig, treasurer; and Mr. Henry Vernail, adviser, the Hi-Y club participated in many of the activities of the school. In conjunction with the Tri-Hi-Y, the club prepared and distributed baskets to needy families at Christmas. A basketball team, composed of members, challenged some of the teams in the school such as the lettermen and the teachers. The annual Father and Son Banquet was held March 12 and a swimming party in the spring. Educational trips, entertainments, and parties were planned and carried out by the program committee.

MUSIC NOTES A NEW TONE

"What would this world be like without music?" The possibility of such a catastrophe fills even the cynical youth of today with much horror. Helping to avoid this possible dilemma were the many musical organizations of Norwin which furnished the melody for all school occasions. Foremost among these organizations was the Norwin Band, which added zest and zip to many a football game. Arrayed in their sparkling blue and gold uniforms the band members added a colorful touch to the athletic activities as they performed their intricate and brilliant drill maneuvers. "Jimmy" Weaver, leader of the band, deserves the credit for assembling these clever and well executed formations.

After the completion of football season the band retired behind the scenes and relinquished the spotlight to the Orchestra. This organization of unsung heroes and heroines provided the musical accompaniment for "Iolanthe," and to climax a very successful season furnished the musical background for the Commencement exercises. The Orchestra is made up mainly of students who prefer music ranging from Chopin, or classical music, to jazz or swing.

Also doing their part in the prevention of the lack of music was the Boys' Glee Club. Attired in snappy uniforms of noblemen and peers, the boys in the Glee Club made their appearance in "Iolanthe," a very memorable event. In addition to their part in "Iolanthe," the boys appeared in assemblies and participated in the Commencement program.

Another popular singing group was the A Cappella Chorus, Norwin's most formal music group. Under the experienced and efficient direction of Mr. Hetrick, this group of mixed voices has participated in most of the music events of the year. Besides singing in regular chapel programs, the members also sang for the Women's Club and in several churches.

PLEASURE AND ADDED SKILL GAINED THROUGH CLUBS

Rehearsal time

Some of Norwin's clubs are for the purpose of teaching the members to become more efficient in their everyday studies and also to give them pleasure in the exercise of these studies.

The Girls' Lyric Clubs were almost wholly for pleasure and the girls did experience pleasure as they met and rehearsed under the direction of Mr. Harold Hetrick every Tuesday and Wednesday. Promoting musical appreciation among the girls was the primary purpose of this organization. A sophomore and freshman girls' chorus was newly organized this year. This was necessary because of the large number of new and inexperienced girls who wanted to become members of the Girls' Lyric Club. Many hidden talents were discovered among these young girls and under Mr. Hetrick's experienced training many advanced to the older group. Aside from their appearances in chapel and general assembly programs, the club aided in the programs of Music Week. The members also participated in the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "Iolanthe," and Baccalaureate services.

To teach serious-minded commercial students to become more skillful, the Order of Gregg artists was formed under the competent supervision of Miss Florence Saunders. Meeting every Friday in the Office Training room during the regular school hours, the members of the club participated in typewriting and shorthand contests. These contests stressed the importance of speed and accuracy in the practice of the stenographic art.

The purpose of the Typing Club was to teach proficiency in typing. It was organized under the guidance of Miss Anna Santner. The meetings of the club were held Wednesday mornings in the Typing room. The junior and senior members of the club strove for accuracy in the speed drills, which were given at every meeting. A study was made of typing and the problems that confront the secretary in a modern business office.

DRAMATIC AND ENCOURAGE S

Lights out, the music softens, the audience hurries to their seats as the curtain rises on Norwin's dramatic productions. "Iolanthe," the sixth annual Gilbert and Sullivan Operetta, was the most outstanding dramatic event of this year. This comic operetta was under the capable supervision of Mr. Hetrick and Miss McMaster. The large cast, composed of the combined musical groups, was headed by Robert Perry as the Lord Chancellor; Robert Shumaker, Earl Tolloler; Robert Dunn, Earl of Mountarart; James Soukup, Stephen; Hazel McMunn, Iolanthe; Phyllis Clarke, Phyllis; Phyllis Widmyer, Queen of the Fairies; and Melvin Buzzard, Private Willis. The story of "Iolanthe" presents Gilbert's favorite themes of duality and plurality with a skillful blending of reality and fantasy.

"Henry Aldrich," the popular radio serial was the theme of the annual senior play, "What a Life." Under the excellent coaching of Mr. Patterson this year's senior play was able to surpass all previous productions. The members of the cast included: Nevin Wollam as Henry Aldrich; Leone Howell, Miss Shea; Donald Biggs, Mr. Bradley; Robert Perry, Mr. Nelson; Martha Woomer, Barbara; Robert Newlin, George; William Eichenberg, Mr. Morrison; Gail Heasley, Bill; Rose Ann Savage, Miss Pike; Ella Barton, Miss Eggleston; Marion Jereb, Mr. Vecchitto; Jean Dobbie, Mrs. Aldrich; Emma Jean Helman, Miss Wheeler; and Robert Shumaker, Mr. Fergerson. The plot of "What a Life" dealt mainly with the trials and tribulations of an average but mischievous high school boy.

In striving to present a commencement program that was original and interesting, the seniors staged on June fourth, an historical fantasy, "The Dream of Freedom." Consisting of many memorable scenes of the past such as the signing of the Magna Charta, the landing of the Pilgrims, a meeting of the Continental Congress, and the trial of the abolitionist, John Brown, this pageant made the cynical and disillusioned youth of this modern age realize the real meaning of freedom as it has appeared to people of all ages. Under the able direction of Mr. Schwartz, "The Dream of Freedom" was a complete success.

Jovially received at Norwin were the many one-act plays and skits presented at school assemblies. Characteristic of these was the one-act play given by the sophomores, "The Great Allowance Battle," starring Scott Hockensmith, Isabel Exton, Malcolm Hamilton, Else Gregor and Harry Davis. Miss Elsie Barnard, adviser of the Sophomore Dramatic Club, directed this play.

In addition a variety program was staged by the talented students under Mr. Hetrick's direction. This was for the benefit of the junior class.

OF ABILITIES

Broadcasting Time

All extra-curricular activities should teach the members to do something useful. This policy is carried out by the Projection Club, the purpose of which is to instruct its members in the operation of the school's new sound projection machine. By learning the intricacies of one of these modern machines, the members could not only train for a future vocation, but also help Mr. Clawson, the adviser, when time did not permit him to be present at assemblies to run the machine. This was one of Norwin's new clubs which was formed with the idea of providing more extra-curricular activities in which all the students could participate.

The Etiquette Club also teaches students to do something useful. The actual purpose of the club this year, under the advisership of Miss MacMaster, was to instruct its members in manners and correct customs of polite high school students. Besides its serious aspect the club provided much of the needed social activity for the underclasses by putting on numerous skating parties, all of which met with wide success among all the students of the school. The group enjoyed the many talks given for them by various teachers in the school on etiquette and other appropriate subjects.

The Library Club is one of Norwin's most active "training" clubs, for the members participate in its activity almost every day by helping in the library. Although most of their duties are in running the library, the girls spent much time in the preparation and mending of worn books and take care of their circulation. This club actually began at the beginning of the second semester when they elected officers and formed the Library Club. Miss Carrie Sowash acted as adviser while Anna Smetak, Jenny Lindh, and Ethel Savage served as president, vice president, and secretary, respectively.

The purpose of the T. E. G. is to create an interest in home economics, to provide a social organization for the senior girls and to give special training in home economics. In addition to their regular meetings of open discussion, the club had special speakers talk on problems of etiquette and beauty culture. Under the supervision of Miss Norberg, the girls gained much practical experience by serving at the various banquets held by the different clubs. During the year, the girls staged several parties and outings and prepared Christmas baskets for the Orphan's home.

PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE GAINED IN THESE GROUPS

Doorway discussion

In order to have club programs function efficiently it is necessary that they have definite and useful purposes. We believe that the four groups pictured on the opposite page are symbolic of purposeful activity and thus are part of the program of the progressive school.

Recognizing the need for the development of leaders in sports, the Leaders' Club was organized several years ago at Norwin. As has been the custom the boys who were athletic-minded and showed promise of being leaders were chosen for membership in the club. This year the boys planned a varied program of sports and bought some equipment for the gymnasium.

The technical clubs train for future vocations and teach the fine points in the use of many things. This is the purpose of the Camera Club which not only teaches the use of the camera, but also how to develop the film after the pictures have been taken. The club, sponsored by Mr. Trombley, has taken many snapshots which the members entered in contests arranged by Mr. Trombley. The adviser also gave tests on which depended the decision as to which members would receive letters.

Another organization which provided extra-curricular activity for athletically minded boys was the Lettermen's Club. Its purpose was to create better fellowship among the boys who were outstanding in the major sports during the year. The Lettermen with help of their adviser,

Mr. David Brown, sponsored one of the most important social functions at Norwin—the Lettermen's Ball, held in April. With the proceeds from the ball the senior members received watch charms.

Technical is the only word with which one could describe an organization such as the radio club. In its meetings the members learned and practiced code, learned the general theory of radio, and had discussions. Several of the boys have built crystal and tube sets. Visits were made to several amateur stations and to larger transmitting stations. The purpose of this club is to prepare boys for a radio license and to stimulate general interest in radio.

By-Weekly Newsboys and Underclass Yearbook Solicitors

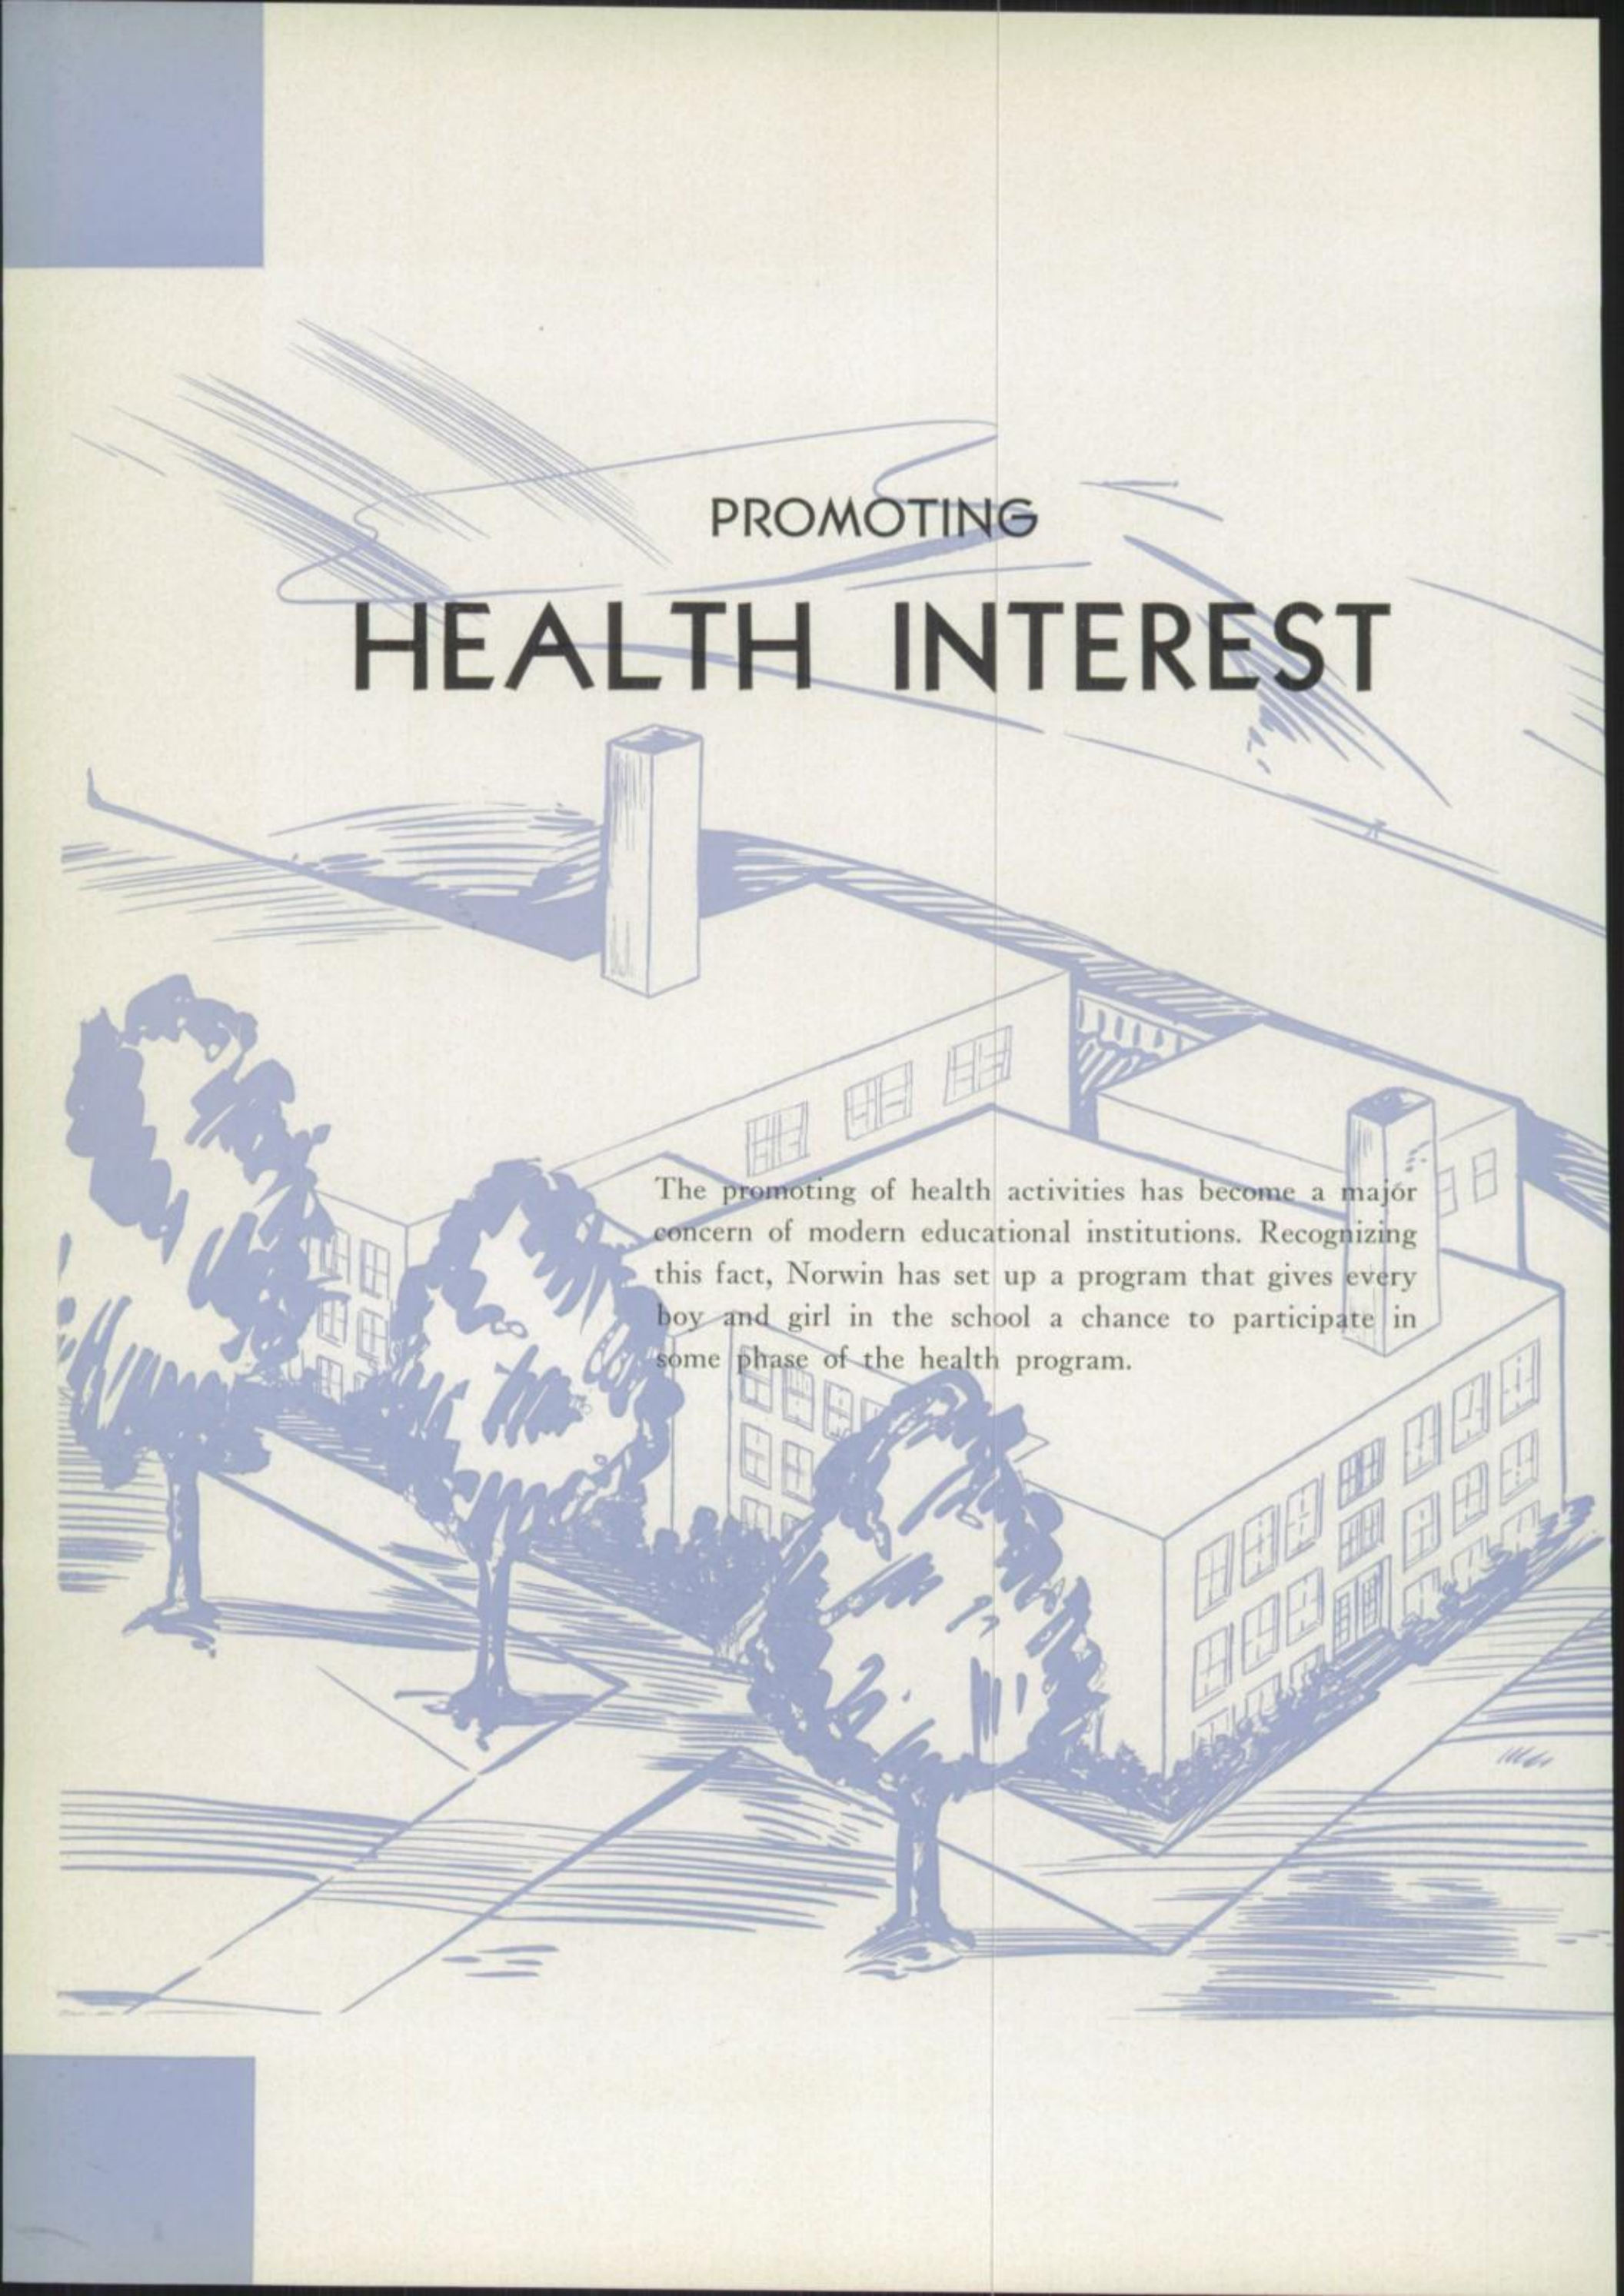

Proving extremely capable in helping the business managers of both publications were the Bi-Weekly Newsboys and the Underclass Yearbook Solicitors. These organizations, composed of the younger, inexperienced students who were interested in staff work, accomplished an integral part of paper and annual work. By adopting this system of delivery and collection the staffs avoided the confusion encountered in previous years.

Under the guidance of Mr. Paul Brown, thirty-two newsboys performed their duties with efficiency and accuracy. They met on the day on which the papers were printed and by each one taking a different home room the papers were soon distributed. Several "super-salesmen" were discovered by this system and will undoubtedly be rewarded with better positions on next year's staff

To the call for yearbook solicitors juniors, sophomores, and freshmen applied for and filled the positions. These underclassmen, who aided in the Yearbook campaign, were named as having indications of salesmanship because of their success in gathering student subscriptions and collecting money. As soon as the payment weeks came around the solicitors were busy collecting from their assigned home rooms.

PROMOTING HEALTH INTEREST

The promoting of health activities has become a major concern of modern educational institutions. Recognizing this fact, Norwin has set up a program that gives every boy and girl in the school a chance to participate in some phase of the health program.

Coach Onder

GRIDIRON SEASON

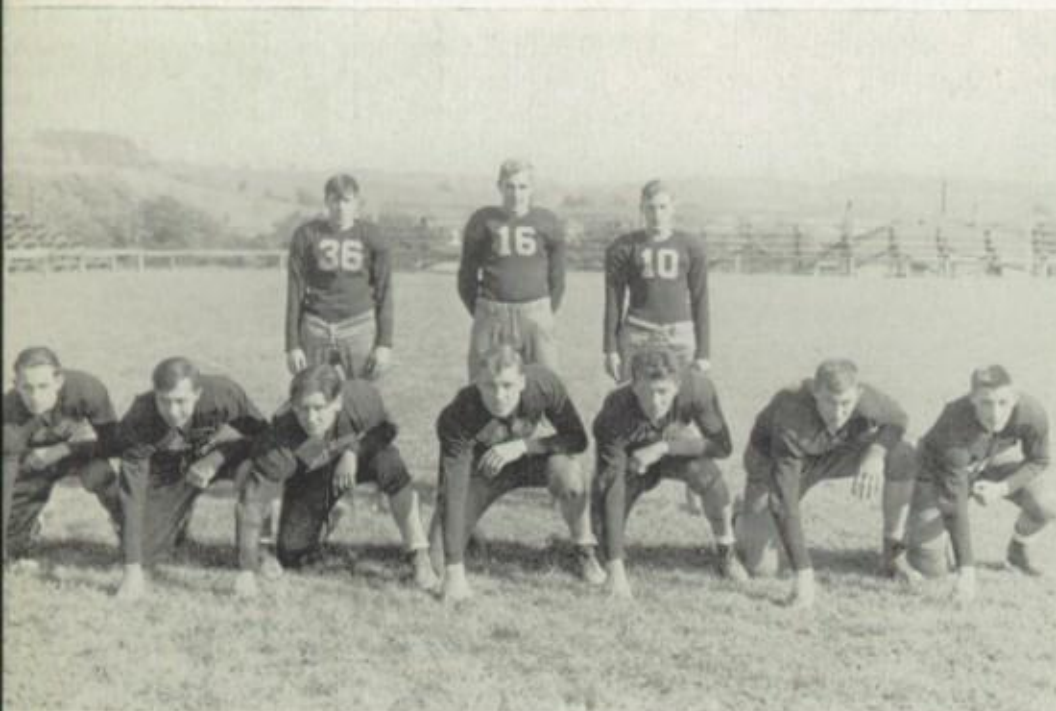

HEALTH BUILDING

Under the direction of coach "Tar" Onder, assisted by Roy H. McMunn, athletic director, the Norwin gridmen faced one of the most difficult schedules in the history of the school. Three new contenders appeared on this schedule: Swissvale, Monesson and Penn High of Verona.

Victory is always jubilantly acclaimed, but defeat was accepted by the 1940 gridmen. In spite of the fact that the untried eleven fought hard for victory in every fray, the obstacles were too great for a small, inexperienced ball club; and the boys wound up the most unsuccessful football season in the school's history. Eight times the local boys jogged off the cleat-scarred gridiron, deeply disappointed and on the short end of the score, but always determined to try again, regardless of the odds.

The Blue and Gold lost a heart-breaker to the Penn Township lads in their opening encounter of the season. After playing a hard-fought game for four quarters, the home team lost by a 7-6 count. Jeannette was the only other team to be worried by the Norwin squad, but won the battle by an easy 44-12 score.

FOOTBALL

Karmazin secured a first berth on the All County Team at the terminal post. B. Filtz was awarded the tackle position on the second All County Team and Clyde Hawk garnered honorable mention. The senior boys who received letters were J. Connolly, R. Burlas, J. Karmazin, P. Cappazzi, C. Hawk, D. Karanovich, B. Filtz, F. Snyder, P. Yurisnic and E. Stenger (manager). The lineup usually consisted of Burlas and C. Cuccaro, ends; Filtz and C. Hursh, tackles; Snyder and Karanovich, guards; Karmazin at the pivot position; Hartland at fullback; Hawk and Clohessy or Capazzi, halfbacks and Eves at quarterback.

Coach McClelland

BASKETBALL

Norwin varsity basketball ran parallel to football this year, suffering a lean season. The inexperienced passers failed to notch a single victory in the section tilts and won only two non-section frays.

John Karmazin was the sole letterman from last year as Coach Clark McClelland opened the season. Uhlig, Siegel, and Swenson were the only other veterans and they had but little experience. The remainder of the squad was composed of new material from the junior high schools, these boys being used as much as possible to gain practical experience for the future.

In spite of their handicap, the "failing floormen" did manage to give several highly rated squads some bad moments. Such thrillers as the Uniontown game (14-18), Scottdale (34-35) and Greensburg (24-36) will not be forgotten soon. Probably the most thrilling of the battles, however, was the last game of the year when the Blue and Gold met Jeannette on the Greensburg floor during the county tournament. After playing championship ball throughout four quarters, the local cagers lost the ball game when Zamojc sent a mid-floor setshot swishing through the cords in the waning seconds of the fray with the score deadlocked at 29-29. Heartbroken, the boys came home and hung up their togs, determined to "go get 'em" next year.

The starting lineup throughout the season usually consisted of Shea, Uhlig, or Plank as forwards; Karmazin, as center; and Siegal, Clarke, or Johnston covering the guard positions.

BOYS' INTERCLASS CONTESTS

PROVIDE ACTION FOR ALL

The boys' intramural sports activities consisted mainly of interclass and interclub basketball and interclass wrestling.

The interclass basketball tournament was held during the second semester in the noon-lunch hour in place of the usual dancing. The teams were chosen from the winners of the various teams within the separate gym classes and coached by members of the basketball team or other leaders. The contest was run by elimination, with one game being played each day.

Interclass wrestling was conducted in a manner similar to basketball. During the first part of the last semester wrestling was carried on only in the separate gym classes. In this way the winners in the various pound classes from each group were determined. A tournament was then conducted between groups from various classes ranging from ninety-five pounds on up into the two hundreds. These were considered the classic events.

Prizes for both basketball and wrestling were offered.

Among the other gym activities two new ones were outstanding. Mr. McClelland obtained fencing equipment which was used at various times during the year. This equipment consisted of rubber-tipped foils, and for added protection face guards, leather gloves, and heavy canvas jackets. Mr. McClelland also had a set of rings installed on which the class were instructed in acrobatics and exercises. Other outstanding activities were volleyball and tumbling which were carried on during the separate class periods.

The interclub basketball program was carried on between such organizations as the Leaders' Club, the Lettermen's Club, and Hi-Y.

All these activities helped to promote the health interest in our modern high school.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC PROGRAM

PRESENTS A VARIETY OF ACTIVITY

In order to get our athletic program rolling this year, the Girls' Leaders' Club was re-organized with Marilyn Hayes as president; Vivian Gongaware, vice-president; Jane Wyncoop, secretary; and Kitty Belle Rook as treasurer. Miss Allshouse was in charge of the entire group whose membership consisted of four seniors, eight juniors and two sophomores. These girls worked in the cages, officiated in games, and did odd jobs around the gym and shower-room.

The spirit of competition led many an athletically inclined Norwin lass to join the fray in annual tournaments of hockey, basketball, volleyball, mushball, ping-pong, badminton, and archery. Capturing two of these crowns were Betty Loutzenhizer, novice ping-pong champion, and Ruth Frisk, all-school ping-pong champion.

Played in February and March was the eagerly awaited basketball tournament. All of the four classes had peppy teams and it was only after many exhausting games that the seniors proved victorious. The freshmen showed great promise this year, and although they lost most of their games, they'll probably give the other teams quite a chase next year.

After constant practice in the art of skillfully returning the evasive "little bird," Marilyn Hayes managed to cop the badminton championship. At the close of this badminton tournament, the athletic schedule was complete, except for archery. After the completion of this sport's activity the equipment was put away until next year when another group of enthusiasts will get it out, eager to become the new champions of girls' sports.
